

US China Innovation and Investment Summit Panel on Therapeutics to Feature Pulmotect CEO

Houston, TX (May 8, 2017) – Pulmotect, Inc., clinical stage biotechnology company developing and commercializing an inhalant designed to prevent respiratory infections, announced today that Nestor Molfino, M.D., CEO, will participate in a panel discussion entitled “Innovation in Biopharmaceuticals” at the US China Innovation and Investment Summit, being held at the Omni Houston Hotel in Houston, Texas on May 16, 2017.

The 40-minute panel discussion will take place at 1 p.m. in Colonnade Salon A. Industry experts joining Molfino in the discussion on therapeutics are Mike Moradi, CEO and co-founder of Sensulin and Jon Northrup, CEO and co-founder of Beta Cat Pharmaceuticals.

Molfino, a respiratory medicine specialist, will provide his perspective on balancing the costs of developing and delivering innovative technologies, drug safety and regulatory issues, important learnings to date and the future outlook of therapeutics in modern healthcare.

Molfino previously served as an independent consultant to biopharmaceutical companies, clinical research organizations (CROs), investors and patient organizations in the planning, designing and execution of drug development and commercial strategies. He was also the Chief Medical Officer at South San Francisco-based KaloBios Pharmaceuticals, Inc.

In addition to the panel discussion, Molfino will represent Pulmotect in the InnoSTARS preliminary stage pitch competition on Monday, May 15 for a chance to earn an expense-paid trip to China to showcase the company’s technology to potential partners and investors during a three-city tour.

The US China Innovation and Investment Summit will focus on five areas of industry including healthcare and biotechnology, agriculture and food safety, renewable energy, advanced manufacturing and information and communication technology. In addition to panel discussions, the summit will feature B2B Matchmaking sessions, an exhibition of technology companies and VIP meetings.
